

Plan B

- Your network connection failed
- Now you can install a reachability monitor
 - This will tell you when the network status changes
 - A positive reachability notification only means you might be able to use the network, not can use it
- It's a good idea to periodically retry your network calls to potentially prompt a connection
 - The network only goes up on request, and there's no guarantee that another application will cause that to happen
